

Abbreviated CV: Ansie Ramalho

Ansie Ramalho joined the Institute of Directors in June 2008 where she is now the Chief Executive.

She sits on the King Committee and represent the IoDSA on various national and international organisations.

Ansie has a BLuris and LLB degrees as well as various post graduate qualifications. Before joining the IoD she was with KPMG, where she held the position of Associate Director from 2002.

Ansie cut her business teeth in the corporate restructuring and recovery environment with assignments that included the Saambou Bank receivership and the Kebble insolvency. Ansie played a key role in respect of both of these. This background provided her with full cycle experience on corporate governance failures and this knowledge was applied with much fruit when she took up the position as a dedicated corporate governance specialist within KPMG.

Ansie has been extensively involved in delivering corporate governance services to the public and private sectors including to listed companies, privately held companies, as well as non-profit organisations.
